POLITICAL PARADE

By CLEM WHITAKER

Governor Warren's call for a special session of the State Legislature, tentatively scheduled for January or February will likely limit legislative action at the emergency session to two subjects—prison reform and liberalization of absentee voting procedure to enable California service men to vote at the 1944 elections.

Th Governor, of course, may broaden the call at the last minute, if any change in war needs should require special legislation, but this is not considered probable and he is said to be definitely opposed to having the Legislature attempt to dispose of matters at this time which can just as well go over to the regular session a year hence.

While actuaries are said to be at work on a re-financing plan for the teachers' retirement fund, it is reported that this program is still incomplete and that it is intended to ask Governor Warren to call a second special session on this issue for April or May.

The proposed legislation to liberalize voting procedure, so as to enable men in overseas service to vote at the May and August primaries, and at the General Election in November, will probably provide for an additional 30-day period for absentee voting. Provisions for simplifying registration procedure for soldier-voters will be included in the program.

Governor Warren, with the aid of Attorney General Robert W. Kenny, is said to be preparing an extensive prison reform program for submission to the Legislature as a result of the recent expose of laxity in prison management at Folsom and in prison work camps. Just what shape this program will take is still undetermined, however.

Unless there is an unexpected switch in plans between now and the time the Legislature meets, the Governor's call will not permit tax or appropriation bills to be considered at the special session, as the state's fiscal experts are said to be determined to husband the growing surplus in the treasury for the rainy days that are bound to come when the war ends.

While Governor Warren, by the terms of his proclamation calling the emergency session, can strictly limit the scope of legislative enactments, the legislators will have a free hand to pass resolutions on any and every subject—and the crop of New Year's resolutions emanating from the session will likely deal with everything from the shortage of whiskey and the cost of living to the conduct of Jap relocation camps.

Legislative officers are hopeful that the session will not extend more than a week.

President of Kiwanis District To Attend Dinner

Warning the home front that it will be held accountable if it fails America's fighting men in the critical days ahead, Russel B. Stevens of Healdsburg, Calif., today prepared to assume the governorship of the California-Nevada Kiwanis district by urging Kiwanians to launch new win-the-war projects and thereby hasten the day of victory.

Stevens will attend the Campbell Kiwanis installation banquet next Friday when W. H. Van Dyke will be installed as Lieut.-Governor of District 12.

Stevens indicated that he would stress the importance of the home front contribution to the men in service and commended Kiwanians who are giving their time and effort to ration board and Red Cross activities, as blood donors and hospital aides and to harvesting of crops and collecting scrap.

Vocational guidance, boys and girls activities and work among under-privileged children also constitute vital services to members of the armed forces, Stevens declared, because they are essential to maintaining democracy and "our way of doing things."

Stevens said that during the coming year he would urge Kiwanis clubs to assist selective service boards in finding jobs for men discharged from the armed forces and to give consideration to post-war employment projects.

Willard H. Van Dyke of Campbell, is one of the fifteen lieutenant-governors who will serve with Stevens.

"Junior Miss" In San Jose Jan. 15

"Junior Miss" opened at the Geary Theatre last Monday night, and is scheduled to run until Jan. 15 when it will leave for San Jose to play a single night in the civic auditorium on Sunday evening, Jan. 16. This hilariously funny play is typically American in its humor and situations. It is irresistibly funny to all adults who have brothers, sisters, uncles or children.

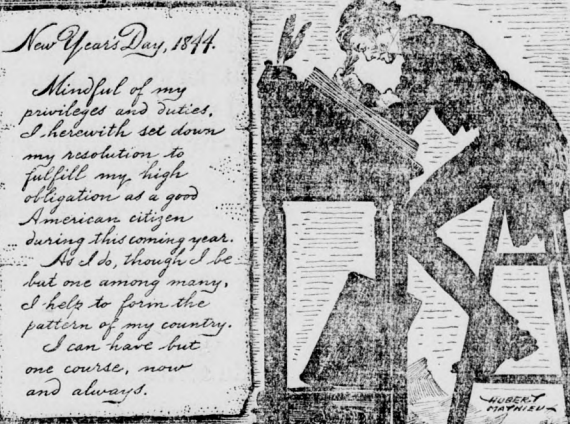

It relates the absurd situations that arise when the utterly adorable but romantic Judy imagines that her father is untrue to her mother when she sees him innocently kissing his secretary. Lois Wilson, heroine of "The Covered Wagon," and famous for her stage success in "The Women," plays the harassed mother, and Eddie Nugent is the bewildered father.

"Junior Miss" is a must for everyone who likes to laugh and forget about present-day problems in two hours of merriment and entertainment. Tickets are on sale at the auditorium box office.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Genasci, Sr., were guests of relatives in San Francisco for Christmas.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

The New Year will be more than ever a year of hope. The darkness that has hung over the world since 1939 and even before, gives signs of fading. In 1944 we hope for the dawn of peace. It is not an unreasonable hope. If realized, 1944 truly will be a happy new year.

With each New Year, progressive nations aim to establish better relations with other nations, to attain higher living standards and to improve conditions in general. Progressive individuals also seek higher achievements. Their aims may not be earth-shaking in scope, but to each one, the realization of those aims will bring greater happiness and contentment.

Almost every person has some goal he would like to reach or work toward. Some people desire to improve their education. But something more than desire is required—action! Instead of just thinking about it, why not contact an educational institution equipped to cover the subjects you want. Then start your course—and stick to it. To other people, clearing up their debts is their principle goal. Here, too, wishing does not make it so. You must do something.

What you, as an individual, do in the next year may seem to have little bearing on the world in general. But if you set out with sincerity to improve your life in some way, you will be contributing your bit toward making this world a better place in which to live and making 1944 a happier year for all.

INVASION SOON?

A high government official has predicted that American war casualties may be tripled within 90 days. Does this mean that a full-scale invasion of the continent, or major thrusts in the Pacific are scheduled for early 1944? American losses for the entire war thus far total slightly over 130,000, including those killed, wounded, missing in action, and those taken prisoner. Action that would triple these losses would certainly have to be of a scope and intensity not yet even approached.

However, military leaders have frequently warned us that the hardest fighting—and the most costly—still lies ahead. It seems logical that as we move in on the German and Japanese "inner rings" of fortifications, the going will become increasingly severe. Whatever the cost may be, we must pay it, and we cannot indulge in the wishful thinking that the war will be won through the collapse of our enemies from within.

In American homes—especially those with service stars in the windows—many prayers will be uttered that our men and methods will prove adequate to achieve the necessary objectives without the appalling losses predicted.

"PIN-UP" BOYS

Are you hoping it will be a boy? Well, the odds are 10,584 to 10,000 that it will be. That is the ratio of the number of boys to the number of girls born in the United States during 1942.

It seems that every time we get into a war the birth of boy babies increases. Whether the stork has any agreement with old man Mars on the score we don't know, but the present ration is about the same as it was during the last war, and is the highest it has been in many years.

Somehow, we never thought that the "pin-up" girls would lose their popularity to the "pin-up" boys. But anything can happen in war time.

WOODROW WILSON

This week marks the 87th birthday of Woodrow Wilson—December 28, 1856. And already 20 years have gone since he passed away. Yet, his spirit, like some great guiding presence is felt at every international council table where men gather in the interest of a lasting world peace.

Woodrow Wilson's crusade for a world organization to prevent future wars failed in the last generation, but it may succeed in this one. If we had joined the League of Nations we do not know how successful it would have been. We only know that it could not have been more unsuccessful than our attempt to avoid war by staying out of the League.

We know now that we must strive to get along with other countries in some sort of international association. We know now that there is no easy way to "run out" on our obligations as a great world power. Woodrow Wilson saw this. But as far as America was concerned, he saw it too soon.

Wilson predicted the present conflict. He said, in 1919, "I can predict with absolute certainty that within another generation there will be another world war if the nations of the world do not concert the method by which to prevent it . . . It will come while this generation is living, and the children will be sacrificed upon the altar of that war."

The march of the years has proved his prediction uncannily accurate. But his voice did not prevail. It was drowned in the protests of those who opposed his plan because of their personal hatred toward him.

Once he said "I would rather fail in a cause that some day will triumph than to triumph in a cause that I know some day will fail."

"DEAD" MEN DO TELL TALES

Most men have only one life to give for their country. But one American flier has already given three—that is, officially.

As a captain in the Army Air Corps he took part in the famous raid on the Ploesti oil fields in Rumania. He was reported killed. Then he wrote home to assure the folks that, like Mark Twain, the reports of his death had been "greatly exaggerated."

Shortly after that his family received notice that he was officially dead, and finally that his body would be sent home after the war. Each time he discovered he was "dead" he wrote home, but he is still having a hard time convincing the family.

Looks like he will just have to stay "dead"—and keep on fighting.

SOUTH SEAS BLUES

The South Seas will never be the same again. That is one of the many things this war has done. According to letters we have seen from the boys "out there," the native girls don't begin to measure up to Dorothy Lamour standards—and sarongs will never have the same appeal again. Nor is that all. A news dispatch from "Somewhere in the South Pacific" reports that straying marines, who came upon a band of wild looking natives holding a tribal celebration, found them singing "You Are My Sunshine," "A Bicycle Built for Two" and "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny."

Hollywood, we fear, will have to find a new locale for those romantic screen portrayals of beautiful maids and god-like men, living in some glorious Eden unsullied by civilization. And we wonder where they'll find it!

1944 FOOD OUTLOOK BRIGHTER

While the lady of the house may be spending her ration points a bit recklessly just now to provide a bountiful table during the holidays, with the result that there'll be some temporary scrimping in the hash-and-soup days to follow, California's food outlook, on the whole, is considerably brighter.

The authority for that cheerful news is State Director of Agriculture W. J. Cecil. While butter is still scarce in the cities, although "quite plentiful" near manufacturing points, that's about the only dark spot in the picture, according to the director.

Packing houses are full of meat and not operating anywhere near capacity, reports Mr. Cecil. Vegeta-

IT WILL be recalled that it was necessary for the Wright brothers to go abroad to receive proper recognition for their first aeronautic inventions. The French government welcomed them and gave them proper opportunity to demonstrate that they had progressed far beyond any others in developing a heavier-than-air flying machine; but as a group, the French aeronauts were disposed to show jealousy for the two Yankees.

Nevertheless, following the successful proof by them of their ability actually to fly, and, what was more important, to guide their machine along a given course, a banquet at Paris was arranged in their honor. Naturally, there was a deal of speech-making. The chief orator was a distinguished Frenchman who devoted the most of his remarks to claiming that France had led the world in the new field of endeavor—or so he insisted—and to proclaiming that future developments ever would find Frenchmen at the forefront. Curiously enough, he had very little to say in compliment of the two chief guests of honor.

Wilbur Wright was next called upon by the toastmaster. Slowly he rose to his feet.

"I am no hand at public speaking," he said, "and on this occasion must content myself with a few words of thanks to the company for its entertainment of myself and my brother. As I sat here listening to the speakers who have preceded me I have heard comparisons made to the eagle, to the swallow and to the hawk as typifying skill and speed in the mastery of the air; but somehow or other, I could not keep from thinking of the bird, which, of all the ornithological kingdom, is the poorest flier and the best talker. I refer to the parrot."

And he sat down amid tremendous applause from the Americans present.

bles are being produced in sufficient quantities to meet present needs. California chickens will lay as many eggs during 1944 as they did during 1943—when a new record was set. And it now appears that point rationing of fresh milk will not be necessary.

We are happy to have this reassuring report from Director of Agriculture Cecil. Now if Washington will only let well enough alone, and not try to improve too much on Mother Nature's program, perhaps the New Year won't be quite so hectic as the year we've just left behind us!

THEY ALSO FIGHT

The men who lead the way in daring invasion thrusts, fighting with guns and grenades against entrenched enemy positions, are the men who hit the headlines and become heroes. And this is as it should be.

But right behind them come another heroic army—the Seabees—who clear up the debris and must fight another tenacious enemy—nature itself. They fight with bulldozers and picks and shovels. And often they do this when the battle still rages hotly nearby, for their fight must be won in a hurry if the "big show" is to be carried on successfully.

One of the best examples of this was at Bougainville. On November 1, the Marines stormed ashore. Bougainville consisted of dense jungles, swamps, and occasional trails. Within five weeks, the Seabees had laid a whole network of roads well inland. The principal road was a four-lane 10-mile highway. Such highways can mean the difference between success or failure in a campaign.

With roads assuming greater importance in peace time, the experience our Seabees have gained under fire should be valuable in building America's super-highways of tomorrow.

THE BOOK
MARK

by marty

"Taps for Private Tussie" by Jesse Stuart.

"It's Kim all right," Uncle Mott said.

Pvt. Kim Tussie was a casualty of the war and his body had been brought home for burial. It was left to Uncle Mott to identify the body. Without any doubt, Uncle Mott identified Kim. And the Tussies buried him. They buried him high on the mountain top, and his widow, Vittie Tussie grieved. She was broken hearted.

Now the Tussies are Kentucky folk. They do not care to work for a living. They got relief "grub" every week, because Grandpa voted the right way. And all of the Tussies that Grandpa cared about and who voted as Grandpa told them to also got relief grub.

But now that Uncle Kim had been killed in the war, his widow was entitled to some insurance money. Grandpa took it upon himself to help her get it. What they did with the insurance money is a rich portion of the book—rich not only in the material things that it bought for the Tussies but rich in its hilarious fun and lovely sensuous folk-poetry.

Never have I read a book that absorbed me so entirely as this book did. It is simply told, with each page unfolding unexpected happenings.

As Dorothy Canfield says of this book: "Is there anything more rejoicing to the eye of man than the sight—whether it be in garden, field, orchard or at a writer's work table—of something alive, growing and growing through the years, till it comes to maturity and stands laden with fine fruit? In "Taps for Private Tussie" Jesse Stuart gives the readers this special joy . . . and shows himself a master workman in this enchanting story, which may well be one of our American classics."

Orange Salad, A Toast To Health

By BETTY BARCLAY

A person's health is no longer entirely his own business since every individual is necessary in some measure to the war effort. With this unified and personalized health as a goal, Americans must not let any food shortages effect well balanced diets at home.

The curtailment of numerous canned foods places added responsibility on fresh seasonal fruits and vegetables and on housewives preparing the balanced diets, so whenever there's plenty of something, that's news to a homemaker.

The plentiful crop of California navel oranges now on the market is an aid to many "what to serve" problems for this fruit may be used in so many ways. For salads alone, there are dozens of combinations using navel oranges as a base.

This type of orange has a bright, clean skin, is easy-to-peel, and because it is seedless, it's easy-to-slice . . . truly a "natural" for salad service. Large size navel oranges are numerous this season and are especially well adapted for use in this manner.

Nutritionally, the navel orange is the perfect answer to today's health needs. Everyone needs to replenish the supply of vitamin C in his body daily and these oranges are a foremost everyday source of this important vitamin. They are also rich in other vitamins (A, B₁, and G) and minerals (calcium, phosphorus, and iron) all contributing toward defense against infection and anemia.

No wonder then, we suggest this navel orange salad plate as a toast to America's health. It takes advantage of the use of oranges, a fruit available the year round and needs no other food to complete the service. Decorative touches of endive, mint, chicory, or other greens may be added, if desired, and Sweet French Dressing may be served as an accompaniment. To prepare the dressing you need:

Sweet French Dressing
(Makes 1 cup)

1/2 cup lemon juice
1/2 cup salad oil
1/2 cup red jelly
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
2 tablespoons sugar or honey
Shake all ingredients together well before serving.

New B, C Coupons
Good for 5 Gallons

Motorists who have the new type "B" and "C" gasoline coupons good for five gallons of gasoline were advised by the San Francisco District of Price Administration to refuse to accept less than value of the coupons.

The OPA issued this warning because of reports from motorists that some dealers are refusing to deliver more than three gallons to each customer, regardless of the type of ration coupon.

The old type supplemental coupon, of course, is only good for three gallons.

Here's how to make certain whether you have a coupon of the new type. All coupons, worth five gallons, have "B-2" or "C-2" very clearly printed on the face. However, the old type supplemental mileage coupon—worth only three gallons—has either "B" or "C" or "C-1" printed on the face.

Not Too Late For Contributions to
1943 Seal Sale

It is not too late to make your contribution to the 1943 Christmas Seal sale, according to local chairman, Martin S. Walsh. Although returns to date are well ahead of last year, there are still 20,000 letters not heard from.

To date over $27,000 have been sent in from generous contributors throughout Santa Clara county. Often the Seals become mislaid or overlooked in the rush of the holiday season. Reminder cards are being mailed to those persons not yet heard from.

Contributions are urgently needed this year to continue and expand the program of tuberculosis prevention in order to maintain the gains made in recent years toward complete eradication of the disease.

S. P. Traffic
At New High
For 4th Year

A new all-time traffic record was rolled up by Southern Pacific in 1943 for the fourth year in succession, President A. T. Mercier revealed today in a review of the company's activities in the second year of the war.

A further increase is expected in 1944, it was stated, and the railroad will need more manpower and equipment to handle the still heavier load.

"Our personnel met the severest tests in the company's history but came through victoriously in every undertaking in 1943," Mercier declared. "New records were achieved by the S. P.

men and women in spite of a growing manpower shortage, and a stringency of equipment necessitating the most intense utilization of locomotives and cars." Manpower is Southern Pacific's greatest problem, according to the announcement, with more than 14,000 former employees now in the armed forces.

Heavier loading of freight cars, quick unloading at terminals, record-breaking up-keep of rolling stock, and further installations of centralized traffic control to increase the capacity of single track by about 50 per cent, were cited by Mercier among helpful factors in the handling of S. P.'s unprecedented traffic.

But the tremendous load in 1943 could not have been carried, he said, without the practical and sustained cooperation of commercial and military shippers, and the government. The generous aid of the press in helping to explain the wartime problems of the railroads was also of inestimable value, the railroad president said.

"Whatever the demands upon Southern Pacific in 1944, I know the company's men and women can be relied upon to continue to do a grand job," Mercier declared.

Letters Continued

From a letter dated in May '31.

Did I tell you of last week's onslaught of medical students who came out here to do a school inspection? There were close to 75 of them, and not knowing that there were to be more than 25, I had gaily invited them all to morning tea!

May 23, 1943: Yesterday our local campaign committee held a second morning market where they sold fresh fruit and vegetables for the benefit of the Health Centre. Then in the evening I attended the concert given for the benefit of the Centre in the great auditorium of the University. I was a guest of the Schreiners and had been invited to dinner with a number of other guests. Unfortunately, just at the time when the dinner party was due to begin, we had several very bad casualty cases come in, and by the time we could give first aid and send them to the hospital, it was too late to go and I had to phone my apologies. One man had his ear practically taken off, one had a fracture of the skull with hemorrhaging wounds of the scalp, and a third had a basal fracture of the skull and was bleeding terribly from one of his ears.

From that gory scene to one of the elite at the University Play, was a long jump. However, by a good scrub and by donning my black lace dress, I made the leap, and landed at the Schreiners just in time to go with them to the University. The great auditorium was full—I should say, at least a thousand people, and that was the third night running of the play. And all that given for us—it was really thrilling.

Feb. 2, 1943: A great event took place last week, Saturday, Jan. 30, when the contract for our new Health Centre building was signed. Dr. Taylor and Justice Schreiner were the signers. Tomorrow they are to start work on the foundations, so I am told, but I shall not believe it until I see it with my own eyes!

Feb. 19: Work has actually begun on our new clinic building.

March 18: Yesterday afternoon the building contractor, the electrician, and the architect for our new buildings, came in for tea, and I was glad to see them. Our new buildings are really going up.

June 16: This noon I went over our new buildings—they are coming along beautifully—and fill me rather with panic for the whole place is going to be so big that I fear I shall have little time except for administration unless somebody else can be persuaded to take on that job and free me for the patients. It really is going to be lovely, but it will cost at least twice as much to run as the present establishment, and I just hope we can make it twice as worth while for the people. The danger is that it will be all machinery and no heart. However, forewarned is forearmed, I hope.

RESOLUTION FOR

In work like mine, seeing that electric and gas customers get service, you come to know a lot of what's going on in California to win the war. Californians are doing a bang-up, busy job on farm, in factory and in the home.

On thousands of farms electric horsepower is in rush demand helping speed production of vitally needed food. And where industries have multiplied in output, we have supplied added service to meet the requirements of thousands of war workers. We have connected many military camps that already have grown until they now are among California's largest communities.

We have put a busy year behind us and no war industry ever got its utility service "too little or too late."

As far as New Year's Resolutions are concerned, I'd just keep mine simple and say we all must work harder in 1944 and put more of our savings in War Bonds. As I see it, that's the quickest way to end this war—work just as hard as our boys will be fighting.

And when Victory comes, I want to hear America say to the boys coming back... "You can count on a job. You can feel free in choosing an occupation. You can go into business with full opportunity to grow and profit in America's postwar development."

DURING THE WAR PERIOD THIS COMPANY—

... wished God-speed to 2,300 of our employees who joined the armed forces, assuring them that their jobs are here awaiting their return.

... built 3,513 miles of distribution and transmission lines to serve war plants, military camps and defense housing.

... connected into service more than 150,900 additional customers.

... met the annual war demand for electric power of more than 1,000,000 horsepower.

... supplied over 12 billion cubic feet of natural gas.
